From Robert E. Truss Jr.

Please just let me say that I am extremely agitated at the thought of anyone restricting XM's services. The general sentiment among enemies of XM seems to be that if we can't compete, let's just legislate them to death.

I will be the first to admit that I do not use the weather and traffic features often. However, I have only been an XM listener for a couple of months. Furthermore, if some moron in congress actually gets a restriction bill of some type passed, then where does one draw the line?

XM provides me with music channels that are so much better than anything I could get through ClearChannel, etc. It seems to me that if one part of XM's services are under threat, then there is trouble brewing for all of XM.

The FCC should remember that consumers should have the right of choice. That right should especially be upheld when so much of what is offered through regular channels is sub-standard.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,
Robert E. Truss Jr.
